

Q: Did Robert Adams Thirty Year Teaching Acknowledge Christianity?

A: Those students familiar with the Pure Form Original Teaching of Robert Adams heard him speak from his most beginning days in his twenties on Christ, and parables on a consistent level, retained in the transcribed Discourses and recordings. Inspired by the 'teacher of compassion', he definitively referenced to Christ in his several Discourses in which he discusses this.

He refers to the beauty and power of Jesus words in many Dialogues. Ministers often came to his talks. He confirmed several women students' practice of the rosary and simply deepened others journey in their faith of upbringing. The third CD, "A Higher Vision" contains discussion and reverence to the Teaching of Jesus amid a nurturing and healing ambiance guiding one to true Happiness amid the world's mirages. "If everyone actually followed what Jesus said, the world would be completely Illuminated."

REFERENCE: There are over one dozen one-two paragraph references to Christ and Bible extractions found in the earliest talks of Robert Adams found within 'The Radiant Life Fellowship Dialogue Vol.' and 'The Temple Love and Light Dialogue Vol.', many given when this delightfully poetic and tender Sage was in his twenties. The CD's 'A Higher Vision' and 'Love Compassion and Humility' Series Discourses contain references to Christ and Bible parables, as well as the continuing Discourses, a well referenced topic Robert found relevant.

These references offer the complete Teaching of this Sage, rather than limiting him to an inaccurate imagery devoid of his sheer embrace of the purest Truths.

Robert spoke often of the beauty and potent power of the Teaching of our Western heritage, particularly his explicit directives on human interactions, relationships and forgiveness, "the most fundamental steps of spirituality".

He brought this topic up in reference to the importance of 'being responsible for someone other than yourself', that is. devoting your actions to the welfare of others as a part of healthy emotional and spiritual health, usually expressed in family life as well altruistic commitments such as supporting and serving a cause alleviating the suffering of mankind.

“Most people like to skip the part about Jesus giving up his life for others. This makes many uncomfortable. However, this is the Heart of God, volunteering to put others first. He knew the ignorance of following religion without heart, and this was his Message. Life is not about temporary desires. There is a fount of bliss indescribable. Jesus tried to tell people that when they know who they are, the suffering ceases. The fastest way to this realization is through love. For this is the Heart of God.”

The "non-dual" tradition differs substantially from the Westernized interpretation, in that it is based on an ancient culture that was solidly anchored in "Correct Living" as described by Robert Adams, fully recognizing that the duality of the material world requires fundamental adherence to the eternal Light.

In this respect, Robert Adams consistently refers to the Teaching of Christ as profoundly applicable to contemporary society, whom he states "is like the third grade. We are still learning not to hurt one another." Mr. Adams points out the necessity for proper discrimination in decision making, avoiding the Western misunderstanding that 'non-dual' implies a lack of moral fortitude in comprehending the requirement of adhering to the eternal goodness of True Nature as manifest on the material realm.

This enables one to easily attune in the busy schedules of modern life, even if inexperienced with techniques. The instantaneous relief from stress, and palpable upliftment as we feel attuned to a truer, ever- present freedom in Divine Love, continue to transform lives. "This is not an 'I am One' word parroting. You must rise to God."

"Do not be mistaken. You cannot ignore the basic laws, The Golden Rule, and say that you are 'non dual'. The true meaning of Perfection is Love. You are repulsed by harming others in any way. This becomes established with your Daily Practices. Others already have these samaskaras or birthed tendencies towards Goodness developed previously. Become absolutely humble and live correctly."

Q: Did Robert Adams live in a remote area away from the rest of the world? Did he 'retreat'?

A: Robert Adams lived for the majority of his life in what is described in real estate as " ..an upscale family friendly suburban enclave.", Raising his seven children in traditional religious schooling and spiritual, conservative moral and ethical principles. Advocating a pure lifestyle, he refrained from having cigarettes, alcohol etc., in his home, and was a staunch, unswerving ethical vegetarian.

His wife a vegetarian nutritionist who spent most of their last years solely caring for him with a highly specialized natural diet of his favorite organic meals in formal courses per the Indian style of dining. His home offered a loving, all embracing refuge for several dozen abandoned children throughout the years, all contributing to the continuation of his work in selfless service.

His children brought European natural medicines back for him regularly as illness approached his body, yet his peace stunned all in his presence. He spent the last few years in a lush hilltop home surrounded by expansive nature views. Emphasizing the need for 'purity' and 'sattvic' environments free from the desensitizing and demoralizing aspects of our culture, he never stated that modern culture need be forgone, only that ones heart be pure, and one abstain from impure lifestyles, hurting others, including animals.

Humorous, touching narratives of this time are described in the ICL JOURNAL, including Fathers Day banquets held by three dozen friends and family members at The Beverly Hills Hotel Polo Lounge Brunch with hilarious events. In this way we enjoy the rare inspiration of wisdom in Western modern life.

Q: Did this teacher 'initiate' any students or audience attendees? Did he tell others to teach, give retreats?

A: No. "I do not do initiations. I am not a 'guru' or anything like that." (The Silence of the Heart) Mr. Adams simply shared his own personal experiences, and how he attained them, with grace, humility, and beauty. "I do not tell anyone that they are enlightened. That they will be.

I do not tell anyone their spiritual stature." Several students attribute 'miraculous' sudden healings of serious illnesses to Mr. Adams that occurred while describing their pain to him, although he did not speak on this, as well as sudden unexplained changes in dire circumstances for the better when they surrendered 'bad habits' such as smoking, gossip, unkindness, etc. to God as he advised. Inquiries regarding individuals claiming that Mr. Adam's announced their own spiritual stature are inaccurate.

In video and transcript Mr. Adams repeatedly refused permission to inquiries by attendees, students and visitors to teach, represent, disseminate or charge for events affiliating themselves with his name. He copyrighted his own works in order to preserve the purity, unchanged, potent and transforming, "to achieve results".

Q: What is the significant reference of inspiration for the Robert Adams ICL website format and logos?

A: Robert himself held up format booklets, and chose illustrations for the continued dissemination of his words. His deep, cherished enjoyment of nature and use of flowers in several dozen narratives and parables symbolizing divinity. The majority of his time was spent in gardens and nature, and his favorite colour blue, reminiscent of the pure sky and sea, are held in his honor.

Robert surrounded himself with family cherub statues in his sleeping area and indeed characterized one of immense angelic assistance to countless souls in giving, asking nothing in return. His most frequently selected poem, "Be As a Flower", most succinctly summarized the essence of his Message.

Q: Does this Teaching speak on more detailed aspects of the angels, life after death, our personal destiny, the future of world events, etc.?... I noticed him discussing this with Dr. Warner in the video...on eternity?

A: Yes. In the deeper lessons these topics are explained, including the presence of angels and protectors for those of a completely pure heart. "You are never alone." However, Robert Adams summarized these issues with this statement. "Do not think too much about the past. As you evolve, you will be guided. If you develop abilities, guidance, or special visions, observe their appearance with equanimity, and continue on the journey Home."

Many students describe in written narrative 'miraculous healings', improvement in circumstances, and observance of remarkable occurrences in the presence of this humble teacher, such as that described in the Silence of the Heart Book. Peace emanated from him as an immediately overwhelming presence, gently disarming hearts.

He narrates this in the tale about 'The Visit to See the King', in his first CD. He explains the laws of karma or 'as you sow so shall you reap' ("Be not deceived...as you sow so shall you reap." Western scriptures) in great detail in light- hearted contemporary language and images in the book “Karma and Compassion”, emphasizing how to emerge from the unperceived cycle of creating incoming unexpected suffering, including the law of forgiveness.

Why some people appear naturally angry, jealous, happy, or gifted according to previously developed skills that now return. However, in this moment, we are joy. In this moment, we can rise above this. In this moment, we can 'begin anew' with forgiveness and love. When teaching with his daughter he occasionally fondly emphasized her experiences in relaying the feminine angelic aspect of divinity, as those of us often observed.

Q: The beauty of the Teaching that I studied with Mr. Adams through attending classes for four years seems quite different, more personal and experiential than ... (various webs, formats, blogs, etc.) or formal 'Advaita'. While sharing time with him seemed similar to being with the traditional 'kindly saint', he did not speak as the 'mind-body' theories that are currently propagated. He enjoyed my family, played with my children, and seemed the epitome of unusual 'loving kindness' as the Dalai Lama emphasizes.. (here student continues discussion of various religions comparatively .)

A: "When you experience the Heart of God, everything else is empty. The Heart of God is pure Love. It is like trying to describe the love for your family to an embittered lonely one who has never known love. You cannot. Therefore, many who have not known love, attempt to project a state of mind expansion unto the experience of God. Yet He is Pure Love. Thus, I do not label myself Advaita, but I share my experience of The Heart of God."

Mr. Adams talks were warm, welcoming, congenial, tenderhearted, and selfless. With respect to everyone, he requested the same of one toward another. In his later years in urban environments, many were new and the product of much experimentation rather than adhering solely to one faith. He emphasized the Brotherhood of Man, and the importance of kindness over analyzing 'states of consciousness'. "Do not waste time discussing spirituality, terminologies, etc. This is of the ego." "Instead, experience the divine yourself. You will not be attracted to talk."

This is the joyous personal experience relayed here in his own words. The Light of love is neither minor nor a 'distraction', but the entire essence of the origin of our very Being. Unknown to later audiences who mistakenly assume Mr. Adams to be 'strictly Advaita ', most of his students were of various faiths and of an orthodox devotional orientation.

He worked actively with his children's projects with Mother Teresa and various international aid groups, and was sought out by celebrated Western teachers of a devotional and highly orthodox, "wholesome' orientation. His devotion to the protection and rescue of animals is well known, inspiring him to be called "The St. Francis of the West".

Far from expounding 'mind theories' of seeking pleasurable experience, he spent much time assisting the homeless and regularly took the shoes off of his own feet to give to street homeless, causing the humorous student requests for "Nike contributions' as his family brought him dozens of pairs a month.

Q: What did this teacher say regarding other teachers?

"Let the Goodness like a fetter, bind my wandering heart to Thee." Mr. Adams, quoting wisdom. Western culture portrays the indoctrination that purity and beauty must be exploited for personal gain. Mr. Adams did not seek Western ambitions of 'success', but Love, Compassion and Humility, not charging for his presence.

The Infinity Institute for Compassionate Living receives voluminous offers monthly to financially commercialize The Teaching and Mr. Adams name with self- appointed teachers for charged 'retreats', lectures, and events.

"Offer each day up as a jewel (of light) to God." Robert Adams

Truth remains in the power supreme. Only In Authentic Truth and Loving Brotherhood will the experience of Divinity Appear.

Per continuing inquiries regarding conflicting unrelated interpretations, for your convenient discernment, you may confirm pure Teaching of Robert Adams only by the ICL logo Institute for Compassionate Living) guaranteeing your quality discernment, and the entire emphasis on only Roberts own spoken true words in his own format , rather than emphasis on the advancement of a teacher, 'satsang', and attempts to interpret his teaching for you.

The Goodness of spiritual laws protect spiritual wisdom's throughout antiquity. We attempt to address your numerous specific requests here, in humble service in focus on Discourse.

Per ancient traditions of love and spiritual laws of correct behavior, true students would never dishonor the directives of the Teacher for his own decisions on the precise continuation of his own personal work. For correct transmission to seekers, Robert stated consistently that he did not wish his name to be placed with individuals or philosophies who contradict the essence and detailed guidelines of the Teaching of love, compassion and humility, in Practices, lifestyle, loving kindness, adherence to vegetarianism, etc.

His reasons for choosing only one primary vehicle of transmission were to insure that the purity and simplicity of its transmission is relayed in its entirety, in his own words, being self- explanatory, and designed for self illumination, applicable to all. His heritage is continued specifically according to his loving instructions after years of preparation amid his beloved's.

Mr. Adams often stated that his words were often misunderstood as students assumed that their personal instructions for their own life challenges were public statements applicable for all students distinctive needs. "Peace and unity are the results of Awakening. This earth is like the third grade.

People are just learning not to hurt each other. This creates incoming pain. Forget this. Behave correctly." Here we present the heart of this beloved Sage by those who resided with him, prepared him for being able to convey his talks in two decades of illness, devoting entire lives to him.

This specific teacher refrained charging money for 'satsang', contradicting the very meaning of the event in the ancient Way of freely teaching. The Teaching itself and those who have devoted their lives to it speak for its potency and purity direct from the Source.

Loving purity of heart only reflects his Message. Though self appointed teachers have attempted to publicly attract his students with the sudden popularity of the book Silence of the Heart , discernment quickly reveals a need to return to the original Source of The Teaching.

Mr. Adams in his Old World gentility, occasionally removed poorly behaving attendees from his group, some emerging after his passing to claim affiliation, devoid of integrity in respect to the originator of the Teaching. Traditional Spiritual discernment reveals the character, intent, and motivation of another, a rare jewel of guidance throughout the sanctity of our lives. "Think on these things. Whatever is pure, whatever is holy. Whatever is beautiful."

Per questions on specific sites, as with any teacher, minister, or counselor, Mr. Adams counseled people from many walks of life with many challenges, finding light and comfort in his fatherly benevolence towards all.

Thus, individuals who only casually attended talks or offered assistance in his last years, currently maintain columns, sites are offering inaccurate information and presentation of his Teaching, or as having a student affiliation that did not occur. Per the ancient traditions, Mr. Adams gave physical blessing in long lines in Presence (or 'darhan') individual acknowledgment to hundreds, rather than a special few, a custom misunderstood to imply special or advanced studentship in the West. Accuracy may be gauged by confirming the source of your information.

Closely bonded, she has released her memoirs of a remarkable life with her beloved father in two books. Her unusual compassion and established work of beauty in carrying on their work with the abandoned is held dear by all of us. She and those of us who lived and worked with this delightful Old World Sage, offer humorous memories of this time within the context of The ICL JOURNAL. "She is like sunshine." Robert often said of her. "She is a healer."
